

Our New Home

It seems like yesterday that we stopped by the Sandcastle booth at the 2008 winter Home Show at Patriot's Place. We had talked about a second bathroom for several years and attended home shows for ideas. But it was not until my mother stayed with us for a week that it became ever so clear that the second bathroom's time had come.

At the Sandcastle booth we talked with Chris Chin about our dilemma; what to do with a 1200 sq.ft. home and the need for a second bathroom. It was then that the idea of a modular box was born.

We decided to meet with Sandcastle at their office in Marshfield to learn more. They seemed to have the package we sought; the modular box for additional space, expertise and resources to design and remodel the existing house, and a focus on delivering on time and within an agreed upon budget. When we met Pablo Saucedo for the preliminary design process, we knew we had found the right company to work with to make this happen.

Those who have remodeled, or put an addition on their home, know the agonies and the ecstasies of the adventure. We were fortunate to have Pablo overseeing the entire process. He supported us, reassured us and made things happen as they should.

So here we are one year later enjoying the fruits of our collective labor. We're glad we did it and happy in our new home.

Thank you Sandcastle!
